What should the color of the firewall of a pre-war (specifically 1933) Plymouth? Black or the body color? I suspect body color but can't prove it.

I have the same question on the 1940 Plymouth. The present color is a `dull` red, but I don`t know what the original color was. Perhaps in responding to your question, someone can also answer mine. Thanks in Advance

Guys - in the early days, all Plymouth firewalls were black, regardless of body color. This includes the 1933 and 1934 models. The 1940 Plymouth a body color firewall. Not sure when they made the changeover but THINK the `35 firewall was body color---Paul Curtis, if you`re out there, can you answer that question?

And where does the paint change from black to body color? Perhaps under the canvas strip that the hood rests on?

There is an `indent` in the metal, which is where the color break came.
